A DATA CENTER IS PROPOSED NEAR YOU: WHAT NOW?

Texas resident checklist | Last reviewed September 2026 | powergrabtx.com/guides/data-center-near-you

10 days	30 days	20%	10 days
Mailed notice before a city zoning commission hearing (owners within 200 ft only)	Typical window after a TCEQ notice. Some air permits lose hearing rights after the first notice.	Of land within 200 ft signing a protest forces a 3/4 council vote	Public records: longer than this and the office must tell you when

- [ ] Find out whether the site is inside city limits, in the city's extraterritorial jurisdiction (ETJ) or on unincorporated county land
- [ ] Join TCEQ's mailing list for your county
- [ ] Search TCEQ's Commissioners' Integrated Database for the company and address
- [ ] Pull up the next planning commission, council, commissioners court and school board agendas
- [ ] Contact neighbors within 200 feet about a protest petition

WHEN A NOTICE APPEARS

- [ ] Write down every deadline in the notice. The NORI window for air permits is the one people miss.
- [ ] File a written TCEQ comment, and a contested case hearing request if you are an affected person
- [ ] Request a TCEQ "public meeting" by name, and ask your legislator to request one too
- [ ] Sign up to speak at the zoning hearing and submit written comments
- [ ] File public information requests for NDAs, emails and applications

BEFORE THE FINAL VOTE

- [ ] File the protest petition with the city
- [ ] Ask for clawbacks, water limits, noise rules and setbacks in any abatement or development agreement
- [ ] Ask whether the company has filed its TWDB water use survey

AFTER A DECISION

- [ ] 20 days to appeal a city staff decision to the Board of Adjustment
- [ ] 23 days after notice of a signed TCEQ permit to file a motion to overturn
- [ ] 25 days after a TCEQ commissioners' decision to file a motion for rehearing
- [ ] Talk to a lawyer early if you may go to court. Some deadlines are only 10 days.
